Title: Removing Students from Class

Related Policy: N/A

Division of Responsibility: Operations

When it becomes necessary to notify a student in a class that is in session the student needs to address some immediate issue (i.e., family emergency, legal issue, safety issue, etc.), the following procedure should be used by any party, including security and law enforcement agencies, who needs to address the student.

The party seeking the student should go to the secretary's office in the department or program for the class the student is attending. The secretary should notify the department dean/chair of the issue if he or she is available. If the department dean/chair is not available, the appropriate Vice President should be notified. If none of those individuals are available, the secretary may assume responsibility for the process.

The responsible party should go to the classroom, politely knock on the door, call the instructor into the hall, and tell the instructor that the student needs to be excused from the class to deal with a critical issue. The instructor should call the student out of class and tell him/her that s/he needs to address the issue. If there is a safety issue or a legal issue, security may accompany the responsible party to the classroom but should remain in the background out of sight of the students in the classroom.

Every effort should be made to not embarrass the student. Also, any interruption or disruption of the class should be kept to a minimum. Once the student is out of class, all parties should return to the secretary's office and address any issues pertaining to the student in a private setting.
